

Essential Skills for Tomorrow's Leaders

Online Webseries

ABOUT THIS CLASS

As you climb your construction career ladder, the ability to get work done through others becomes a highly-coveted skill set to the organization. This three-part webseries will equip individuals with the essential skills essential for leading a highly-collaborative, diverse, team-orientated workforce.

Who Should Attend

This is a construction industry leadership program for individuals transitioning to office roles, project managers seeking upward mobility within a company or current business or owners striving to maximize the potential of their organizations.

THE SPEAKER

Ken Collins

Ken Collins Coaching

For nearly 40 years Ken has had his boots on the jobsite as a construction industry professional. Throughout that time, he learned firsthand how the construction industry builds America's infrastructure through talented people working together. At the foundation of his philosophy is a "people first" approach. By empowering key contributors, sharing life experiences and continuously learning while he teaches, he develops connections across generations of talent, providing personalized, relevant guidance to forward-thinking organizations. With diverse experience, creativity and trust, he immerses himself into companies at every level; working to identify the specific organizational needs and institute the strongest, sustainable solutions.

FORMAT

This program will be using GoToWebinar for three, 90-minute to two-hour live, online modules. Participants will receive an invitation to join the sessions after completing the registration. The program includes a downloadable, interactive workbook.
